Summary of reasons for decision:

The computer image file is deemed to be objectionable because it promotes and supports the exploitation of young persons for sexual purposes.

The image is an amateur close-up photograph of a teenage girl involved in sexual activity. It is a photographic record of the sexual exploitation of the girl. In this particular case, the photograph was taken in New Zealand and if it was to be shared, along with details of the circumstances in which it was taken and the girl's identity, this dissemination would amount to further exploitation. The image advances the notion that young teenage girls are legitimate objects of adult sexual fantasies and viable sexual partners for adults. The effect is to encourage the sexual exploitation of young people. The image may also be used by adults to groom other teenagers to participate in sexual conduct.

The classification of this publication interferes with the right to freedom of expression set out in the New Zealand Bill of Rights Act 1990. However, this is an outcome that is consistent with Parliament's intention and is a reasonable limitation on the freedom of expression. The classification reflects the concern of a free and democratic society to limit the availability of publications that promote the exploitation of young persons for sexual purposes.
